Dear Nirali,

What does it mean to be healthy?

It's a simple question on the surface. But it's also a highly personal one, having deep and different meanings depending on who you ask.

To you, maybe being healthy is simply not getting sick. It might be losing some weight or quitting a habit. Or avoiding a disease that runs in your family. For others, it may be all about lifestyle – managing a chronic condition so you can keep up with the kids. Or the grandkids.

Many people considering a PartnerMD membership are seeking care that will help them achieve their definition of healthy. They're no longer willing to settle for the status quo in health care, from long stints in the waiting room to rushed appointments.

They're part of a growing number of folks who have decided that they want a physician with the time to manage their health proactively, on their schedule. And they're setting the agenda for their care based on everything they want to accomplish in life.

PartnerMD's concierge care model is centered around the idea that the care we provide should be as personal as the reasons our members have for wanting to be healthy.

PartnerMD physicians take on a fraction of the number of patients that traditional primary care physicians do, so they have more time to spend with their patients to understand, support and sometimes challenge their health goals.

Right now so many of us are thinking about what we want to change this year. If any aspect of your health is on your mind, ask yourself if your current primary care relationship is helping you reach your health goal.

If you think it might be time for a change, call (804) 887-1646 to learn how to start receiving the care you deserve.

Make this the year that your health doesn't define you. You define your health.

In good health,

Jim Mumper, M.D.

P.S. To help you get started on your road to health, I'd like to offer you $200 OFF your first adult membership if you join by Feb. 28, 2017.
